One Indicted for "Peonage" in East Arkansas

Federal Jury at Little Rock Hears East State Cases

14 Persons Are Summoned by Two Special Federal Attorneys

CRITTENDEN PROBE

Crittenden Jury Denies Peonage Is Practiced on Share-Croppers

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The federal grand jury investigating alleged peonage in east Arkansas Thursday afternoon returned an indictment against an unnamed defendant charging violation of the anti-slavery statutes of the United States.

U. S. District Attorney Fred Isgrig announced the return of the indictment and said it named only one person.

"The indictment charged aiding and abetting in holding a man in slavery," said Isgrig.

U. S. Jury in Session

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—A federal grand jury opened an investigation Thursday into charges that peonage exists in the eastern Arkansas share-cropper belt.

Gordon Dean and Richard Shannon, special attorneys detailed here by the Department of Justice, brought before the jury evidence gathered from field investigators, and individual complaints.

Fourteen persons, including 10 negroes, were summoned to testify.

Among those called was Mayor T. S. Mitchell of Earle, Crittenden county.

When the jury recessed for luncheon Dean said he expected to complete the case late Thursday.

Ten witnesses were heard during the morning.

"None" Says Crittenden

MARION, Ark.—(P)—Crittenden county officials made public Thursday a county grand jury report which declared the jurors found no evidence of peonage in the cotton fields after an investigation resulting from charges repeatedly made by the Southern Tenant Farmers union.

The Crittenden grand jury "welcomed" a federal grand jury peonage investigation at Little Rock, and offered to co-operate with any federal agency in such a probe.

Italy to Leave If Ethiopians Remain

Mussolini Preparing Vigorous Statement Against League's Stand

ROME, Italy.—(P)—Seats for Ethiopia in the League of Nations assembly means Italy's absence around European council tables, well-informed sources declared Thursday.

Mussolini, whose attempt to have Emperor Selassie's representatives barred from Geneva failed Wednesday, was reported considering a vigorous statement of his future policy.

Gold Lures Tennessee Stars

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.—(P)—A quartet of former University of Tennessee football stars will play with pro teams this fall—Gene Rose, Howard Bailey, Pug Vaughan and Beattie Feathers.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(Special)—The League of Nations has hubbed a pretty stiff proposition in that Italian-Ethiopian situation. Italy's position is something like this: That there's no such place as Ethiopia any more, and if there is such a place, what are you going to do about it, and England and France are willing to let bygones be bygones, that there was no war in Africa after all. It was sort of like Japan's battles in China—just incidents.

Now it begins to look like the farmers down in Mississippi will have to resort to machines if they get their cotton picked in time to meet the latest notes on their automobiles and the first notes on the machines.

Dam Opened Up to Check Rebel Army

Town Washed Away—Armies Are 36 Miles From Madrid, 13 From Toledo

MADRID, Spain.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Madrid's defenders, in a new and extreme trust to stave off the insurgent ins, announced Thursday they had loosed the waters of the Alberche dam over San Martin de Valdeiglesia—which is the scheduled point of convergence for the Fascist columns 36 miles west of the capital.

The government said it believed the town had been destroyed, and with it a considerable amount of the insurgents' guns, trucks, horses and mules.

13 Miles From Toledo

WITH THE INSURGENT ARMIES, at TORRIJOS, Spain.—(P)—Four insurgent columns, after the briefest of rests, pushed on toward Toledo Thursday.

The advance guard surrounded the villages of Barchene and Rieves, 13 miles from Toledo—where a few hundred beleaguered Fascist rebels have held the besieged Alcazar fortress for two months against government troops occupying the city proper.

Copyright, Associated Press

TOLEDO, Spain.—Government defenders of Toledo night for defense outside the city, for attack within. Reinforcements marched up the road toward Torrijos, 18 miles northwest, to make a last desperate stand against the Fascist-Moorish captors of that highway town.

Dispatches from insurgent headquarters at Talavera said Fascist forces had penetrated within a few miles of Toledo.

Within Toledo the government ordered a supreme effort to kill the last remaining insurgents in the wrecked Alcazar, so the attackers could be free to join their comrades beaten back on the Maqueda-Torrijos front.

Fresh Forces Needed

A consolidated defense with fresh reinforcements alone could save Toledo from falling to the Fascist insurgents, the government leaders feared.

The siege of the Alcazar was a race against time.

In response to a governmental appeal, volunteers scrambled into the ruins of the ancient citadel from all sides, and in bitter sallies drove the defenders deep down into the dungeons where their families were huddling.

It was the 64th day of the siege. Occasionally bullets of insurgent marksmen splattered off the walls of buildings near the citadel, showing it still defended.

Soldiers Reach Interior

Government leaders asserted some of their Assault Guards had penetrated into the Alcazar's kitchens, stables and dining rooms where formerly, as cadets, many of their present enemies had dined with them.

During the day the attacks had been concentrated on the southeast wing of the fortress, the only section still fairly intact.

A government plane "Hedgehopped" by the windows of the fortress, strafing them with machine gun fire.

It was announced three persons were killed, including two women, in Tuesday's insurgent aerial bombardment of Toledo.

The enemy planes flew back over the city in the morning, but were driven off by five government planes.

Proclamation for Land Commissioner Revoked

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Governor Futrell Thursday afternoon revoked his proclamation of September 14 which authorized the state land commissioner to exceed his proportionate apportionment for expenditures in the last six months of 1936.

Cotton Mats Used to 'Cure' Concrete

Speedier and More Economical Than Older Highway Method

NEW YORK.—(P)—Increasing use of cotton mats for "curing" freshly laid concrete pavement points to the development of a substantial new market for cotton textiles.

The institute reported that more than 89,000 of the mats, used as a substitute for burlap "wet earth" or "burlap-pounded" water curing method, have been distributed by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads to various states for service tests.

Most mats are approximately 22 feet by 6 feet, made of coarse cotton fabric and filled with eight ounces of cotton per square yard.

A report from the Texas Highway Department, which has been using cotton mats since 1935, said curing by this method required only 72 hours and was accomplished at a saving of from one cent to 4 of a cent per square yard, aside from economies from reuse of the mats 75 to 100 times.

Private Property Returns to Russia Under Constitution

Personal Ownership of Homes, Domestic Articles, Protected

NOT ALL ARE POOR

Russia Has Middle Class, and Even Wealthy One, Actors, Writers

By JOHN LLOYD

MOSCOW.—(P)—Soviet Union citizens may own their own homes when their new constitution goes into effect, since provision for protection of private property is one of its most important features.

Only the "essential" part of housing in cities and industrial centers is still listed as irrevocable property of the state. Personal ownership of homes and objects of domestic use is to be protected by law.

People cannot buy autos for awhile as they are not yet on public sale, but they can purchase radios, silk dresses, electrical kitchen gadgets, fur coats and such things. The big investment—home-building—is to be promoted on a large scale.

Citizens who have money may "buy into" co-operative apartment houses on a cash basis or by the installment plan.

O.K.'s Building

To really understand the importance of these commitments it is necessary to go back to the time when private property was nationalized, that is, taken over by the state.

True, private ownership of some small houses was still permitted and later private building of small individual homes was encouraged. But always there was the question, "Am I safe in the ownership of this property, or is it too, sooner or later, to be taken over?"

The new constitution answers this question. In effect, it says, "Go ahead with your building. Your home will remain yours."

Not All "Poor"

Immediately after publication of this promise an official announcement was made that increased government aid would be granted to the Soviet Housing corporation, which finances erection of co-operative apartment buildings.

Vice-Premier Vlas Chubar added a prediction that there would be at once a large increase in home-building.

The citizens, it must be explained, are not all "poor," or more precisely, not all limited to incomes of only two or three hundred rubles a month. There is, just as in any other country, a "middle" strata, not to use the hated word class, which earns double or triple that amount.

Then there is, speaking in "capitalistic" terms, the "wealthier" class, including many of the actors and writers, whose incomes go well into the thousands per month.

Extends to Farmers

As a result there are "savers." According to official figures savings accounts in the Soviet Union contain a total of 2,900,000,000 rubles and over 400,000 workers have accounts of over 500 rubles, many of course mounting far above that.

The "essential" part of housing which is to remain the property of the state is not further defined in the constitution. It is expected, however, to include practically all of the buildings already administered by the government.

Provisions for protection of private property extend to the country as well as the cities. Members of collective farms are permitted to have their own homes and their own small plots of ground, with enough domestic animals and farming implements to maintain a family.

Private ownership and operation of industry will be permitted only in cases of co-operatives or small enterprises where the owner does all the work. Employment by private owners is termed exploitation of labor and is prohibited by law.

Cheating Death From Dizzy Heights of 'Gate' Bridge

Death takes a holiday for steel workers on the gigantic bridge spanning the Golden Gate at San Francisco, since this huge life net was installed. Strung beneath the steel framework of the bridge, it is designed to catch workmen should they make a misstep on the girders towering high above the bay. The net is said to be the first of its kind to be used on construction jobs of this character.

Tokyo Abruptly Rejects Protests From China in Shanghai Incident

SHANGHAI, China.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Residents of Shanghai's Japanese community asked Tokyo Thursday to "dispatch immediately to China land and sea forces sufficient to accord full protection to Japanese lives and property."

Chinese Protest Ignored

SHANGHAI, China.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Japanese officials, backed by armed marines patrolling a large area under martial law, rejected curley Thursday Chinese protests against invasion of the Chinese settlement and warned the entire city to "keep its head cool."

Strong forces of blue-coated Japanese in tanks and armored cars, and on motorcycles, drew taut lines around a large area of the International Settlement in "self-defense" measures resulting from the killing of one marine and the wounding of two others.

Must Use Care Storing Poisons During Winter

AMES, Iowa.—(P)—Winter storage of agricultural poisons must be handled with care to avoid loss of lives and supplies, says Dr. J. C. Drake, state entomologist, following a study of reports telling of loss of lives to humans, cattle and other animals because farm poisons were carelessly stored.

"Poison kept over winter," he said, "should be stored safely in buildings in leak-proof containers, carefully labeled, where humans and domestic and wild animals will not have access to it."

Record Crowd for Saenger Birthday

1,541 Attend Show Celebrating Swanke's Fourth Anniversary

An overflow crowd of 1,541 persons attended the Saenger theater's birthday anniversary party Wednesday night, setting an all-time high attendance record.

The seating capacity of the Saenger, which is one of the largest in the state, is 1,155.

Arthur Swanke, starting his fifth year as manager, said Thursday that 1,226 persons bought tickets during the first hour of the show. Many were forced to stand in the lobby to view the picture or wait until the second show.

The previous high attendance record was established only last week when a Saturday crowd of 1,466 persons jammed the movie house from 1 to 11 p. m.

The previous high mid-week attendance mark was set several months ago when 1,339 persons were attracted to the show for a "bank night" program.

The birthday party marked the ninth anniversary of the Saenger theater in Hope, and the beginning of Arthur Swanke's fifth year as local manager.

Cold, Hot Packs Useful in Treating Both Nose-bleed and "Black Eye"

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

The nose, as an organ of the human body, has received at least a fair share of attention in literature, including medical literature. It seems to be always out in front where it is subject to a good deal of wear and tear. For that reason, nosebleed is a common condition, following either a purposeful "sock" or a collision with a door in the dark.

One of the first steps in stopping a nosebleed is to make the bleeder lie flat, preferably with his face down. Ice water, or hot water, may be applied to the nose, or it may be temporarily packed with sterile gauze.

It will not help very much, except in distracting the patient's attention, to pass a key down his back, make him inhale smoke, put ice on the back of his neck, or collect spider webs and stuff them into his nose.

If he has nosebleeds frequently, the person concerned should have his blood examined carefully to determine whether something is wrong with the blood. — news are, of course, instances in which the blood does not clot, or coagulate, easily because of deficiencies in some of the blood elements involved in clotting. Sometimes small blood vessels in the nose may be eroded by an infection or by an injury, and healing will be slow.

A specialist in nose diseases can look directly into the nostrils with suitable lights and a mirror, and learn whether it is a dilated blood vessel, an ulcer, or some other condition which keeps the blood vessels from healing. It is then possible to stop the bleeding by applying caustic to the bleeding point.

Don't Scare Boy or Girl About Visit to Dentist

A little boy was going to have an operation. So he went with his mother to the hospital the day before the pilgrimage, to look over the situation. He met his nurse-to-be, saw his room, met some of the doctors about the place (the already knew his own) and got to be great pals with the surgeon.

His mother arranged this for a reason. She wanted him to feel at home when she had to leave him in the hospital staff's care. And to establish trust in those about him so he wouldn't have hysterics when the time came for things to happen.

Didn't Want to Leave
The result was that there wasn't a cheep out of him, either before or after the operation. Everyone agreed that he was the best little soldier they'd ever seen. When it was time to go home, he said, heck, he didn't want to go. And that's all there is to that story. Except to add that the child did suffer a great deal but put on a front to please those new friends he knew and liked.

There is a lesson in this, I think. All children have to go to dentists and doctors at times, to have unpleasant things done. But half the trouble that precedes the actual operation is fear of strangers. If a child knows the dentist, or the doctor, or anyone else who has to administer a painful treatment, he is very likely to be calm. He plays up to pride and wants to put up a good front.

He is so apt to hear how the dentist

HOLLYWOOD

By ERSKINE JOHNSON NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Fishing Laurels Reap No Fishing Laurels

EDITOR'S NOTE: During Paul Harrison's vacation, his column, "In Hollywood," will be conducted by Erskine Johnson, of NEA's Hollywood Bureau.

HOLLYWOOD.—A couple of guys who like to fish went down to the sea the other day, armed with $5000 worth of fishing tackle. For seven hours they cruised up and down the waves off Catalina Island. But they didn't catch a thing; not even a cold.

One of the guys was Stan Laurel, who finds time to act in the movies when he isn't fishing. On the screen he's funny. Fishing, he's amazingly unfunny.

The other was your correspondent,

'Where Do We Go From Here?'

the stern.
Handy Captain
There's a captain, too, a lanky gent with a frozen face. Laurel wouldn't know what to do if the engines sputtered and died, and he seldom takes the wheel himself. The skipper also bats Mr. Laurel's hooks, rules the galley, and keeps everything amazingly ship-shape.

The captain would wash dishes, too, if Laurel didn't like that chore himself. But Stan doesn't wash 'em in approved manner. He grabs a plate like a discus, leans overboard, and lets the rushing water lick the plate clean. "Fun," he said. We tried it, too. It was fun.

Ruth Laurel, the comedian's pretty blond wife for whom the boat is named, also likes to fish. She accompanied us and, like all good anglers, didn't mean because the fish wouldn't bite. She dozed off occasionally, but otherwise her fishing deportment was class AAA.

Tackle Galore
The amount of fishing tackle on Laurel's boat is astounding. Two lockers are jammed full of leaders, feathered lures, hooks, canned bait, assorted rods, and an even dozen reels ranging in size from 50 to 500 yards. There's even a live bait tank, hidden beneath an otherwise swanky, leather chair. Laurel knows exactly what everything is for and he handles a rod like an expert.

He bought the boat a year ago from a Catalina tuna club member, and the equipment was included. He caught a 17-pound swordfish last summer, but hasn't been able to hook another since. (See postscript.) He catches lots of sharks and smaller fish, though.

If his swordfish luck doesn't improve, however, Mr. Laurel is going to crate, or whatever they do to boats, and ship it by steamer to the gulf of Lower California. He'd like to catch a swordfish once a week, at least. And he hears that fishing is better there. "There are hundreds of 'em down there." That's just how nutty Mr. Laurel is about fishing.

Laurel's screen partner, the hefty Mr. Oliver Hardy, seldom goes to sea with the other half of the team. Hardy's a golf bug, which doesn't exactly make Mr. Laurel unhappy. "We can't see the boat when Ollie gets on," says Stan.

A Break at Last
P. S.—A couple of days later Stan caught a 25-pound marlin swordfish in the record time of 44 minutes. The Catalina Tuna Club awarded him a gold button, and he's wearing it now every place he goes.

is College Giving U. S. Its Leaders?

Harvard is our oldest, richest and proudest university. From it, if from any university, we should be entitled to expect graduates who would be our leaders. Are we getting them?

John R. Tunis, himself a Harvard graduate, asked himself this question, and conducted an elaborate check-up on his own class—that of 1911—to get the answer. He puts the results in a book, "Was College Worth While?" (Harcourt-Brace, $2), and it makes unpleasantly surprising reading.

their principal aims in life are to vote the straight Republican ticket, keep off the breadline, and break 100 in golf.

Is this, he asks, what Harvard does for us? Was all this worth while? Is a college education worth anything, if it leaves graduates in a groove like this?

Mr. Tunis lets his readers supply their own answers.

Roosevelt Careful in Campaign Plans

"Lucky Breaks" Merely the Result of Anticipating Events

By PRESTON GROVER

Associated Press Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—The timeliness of President Roosevelt's announcement that he was advocating a form of crop insurance was in keeping with a whole series of events so adapted to meet political developments that coincidence seems partly ruled out.

Sensational politicians sense that a well planned campaign has been designed to anticipate just such problems.

The President and his advisors may be credited with estimating in advance on just what grounds the administration would be attacked. What better than to devise a running defense that at times, like the crop insurance matter, broaches upon carrying the fight into the enemy's territory? Instead of merely defending AAA and its substitute, soil conservation, the President advances a new plan.

That it actually was "stealing thunder" from the Republican candidate appeared to be quickly evident when Governor Landon issued a brief statement saying he had planned to discuss crop insurance in his speech next day.

So Industrialists Called
Long before the national conventions much talk along the curbstones was that business generally was against Roosevelt, alienated by asserted leftist tendencies.

Who should bob up at the White House for a series of conferences about that time, but some of the leading industrial figures of the nation, heads of companies which only shortly before had declared dividends or had issued reports giving other evidence of happier times. The President simply explained he was consulting industrial leaders on methods of government cooperation.

More recently the statement by Colonel Knox which was interpreted widely as implying bank deposits and insurance policies were unsafe was followed by a call of insurance leaders at the White House. They had been invited earlier, well in advance of the Knox statement. After the conference the White House permitted them to answer.

Colonel Knox, amplifying his statement later, said that he was not questioning the soundness of banks and insurance companies, but was giving warning of the danger of inflation destroying the value of savings and insurance policies.

The insurance men said that $3,000,000,000 of new insurance was evidence of popular confidence, and insisted insurance was safe.

At that time it was indicated, but not formally announced, that bankers might be calling at the White House some time soon.

Can It All Be Luck?
Could it be surmised that bankers and insurance men had been summoned as part of a plan to offset any criticism that inflation was being forced upon the nation by New Deal spending and borrowing?

So often have there been instances of seeming coincidence of which the administration has taken advantage that many have simply classified them as "Roosevelt luck."

But can it all be just "Roosevelt luck?"

We have worry and fretting from morn till night,
And anguish weighs on the heart;
The thorny way seems hard to fight,
And life is a bitter part;
But there is a burden greater yet,
Much peace of soul it has cost;
It is building a bridge with toil and sweat
O'er the stream that is never crossed,
There's looking for crossings all the day
And searching along the shore
For a bridge or ford along the way
We shall never travel o'er.
Then gather the roses along the way,
And treasure their fragrance rare;
Rejoice in the bright and joyous day,
Refusing to borrow care;
For sorrow and pain will surely come,
And your soul be tried and tossed;
But don't be bridging to reach your home,
O'er the stream that is never crossed.

WITH THE LADIES

WITH THE LADIES
Court etiquette flew a democratic flag on the yacht Nahlin, the boat which King Edward of England chartered for his summer cruise on the Balkan seas. As the Prince of Wales, it was all right for the king to dance with whom he pleased and squire whom he pleased to the theater. But as king—London, Paris, Vienna and New York waited to see if he would follow in the footsteps of his later father's court—a court to which divorcees were not admitted. Mrs. Simpson had had two divorces, the dowagers recalled. The king has rallied nobly. He is making out his own guest list and including whom he pleases. Long live the king! Accession to Throne Should Not Void Friendships.

After all, as the dashing young prince of the British Empire, Edward had his favorites. Now, as the august monarch of the realm on which the sun never sets, why should he be expected to make out a list of new names? If he liked some one yesterday, how can he be expected to change his mind about that person today? Therefore, to cut an old acquaintance would be most discourteous and priggish. Edward, fortunately, isn't the type of man—or king—to say: "I liked you before I had a throne, but I've stepped up higher now."

King Edward proved himself a gentleman, a friend, a knightly monarch, when he asked his good friend, Mrs. Simpson, to go along on the yachting party just as he would have done a year ago when he was the debonair, dashing Prince of Wales. Mrs. Simpson is a witty, pleasant, entertaining woman in whose society the king delights. If she was good enough for him as prince, why change her status now he is a king?

Ten or fifteen years ago, acceptance of Mrs. Simpson as a king's playmate would have been challenged so severely by society that a king would not have dared extend the invitation. It is a splendid proof that the world is growing more tolerant, more understanding, more broad with kindness that today it offers no criticism as the royal yacht goes down the Adriatic, the Aegean and the Indian.

Society Evidence Liberal Attitude
It is not any more possible for kings always to prefer princesses than it is for doctors to prefer daughters of doctors, ministers to choose daughters of ministers. It is impossible to expect a monarch to select his friends completely among royalty. The world is broad, interesting and inviting. Any red-blooded king will find a multiplicity of interests and of people. Fraise should be given that a king is no longer expected to stay cooped up in a throne room with a lot of pedigreed people. The pedigreed people, too, grow weary of a new face and voice and viewpoint.

Freedom of action, speech and thought has been the eternal cry of the masses. It is the plea that always has set the drums to beating and the men to marching in the wars of civilization. The populace has achieved its desires. Why shouldn't the same privileges be granted the monarchs?
The fact that society smiles approvingly on the democratic impulses of the British ruler, and hopes that he'll have smooth sailing, and a very good time as well, augurs much for the common meeting ground to which the peoples of the world are coming. Only in such a social instance as the one involving Mrs. Simpson would the proclamation that the king can do no wrong have held a doubtful meaning. As it is, it comes ringing stronger than ever down the seas.
"The king can do no wrong... Long live the king."

Jiggs was fat. The day was hot. And sales were low. He was making his final call for the day.

"I wish to hell you'd buy it," promptly answered Jiggs.
A tourist traveling through the Texas panhandle got into conversation with an old settler and his son at a filling station.
"Looks as though we might have rain," said the tourist.
"Well, I hope so," replied the native, "Not so much for myself as for my boy here, I've seen it rain."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KAY DUNN, pretty young nurse, is hired as a stewardess on Overland Airways and the same day, meets TED GRUBMAN, veteran pilot, who flies the trans-Pacific route.
Ted is assigned to the western division of the service. MONTE BLAIN, apprentice pilot, pays her more attention. Monte is a daring, romantic, but Kay is more interested in Ted. She and Dickie, Ted's adopted, ten-year-old son, become close friends.
Ted returns from a trip to the Orient in which he explains his long talk in which he tells her his views on marriage. "To be successful, he says, the marriage must be planned scientifically, just as a plane flight. Kay does not agree to all this, but she asks her to marry him, she says yes.
The marriage takes place and the honeymoon is a trip to the Orient by plane, is a glamorous adventure. In Honolulu they go to the beach and Kay, thinking of the weeks ahead when she will be alone and Ted flying over the ocean, suddenly becomes frightened.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XIV
KAY retained, neatly and precisely pigeonholed in her mind, unforgettable high lights of her three weeks' honeymoon trip on the trans-Pacific flight.
She remembered vividly that incident when a strikingly beautiful woman, obviously a Eurasian, had made a scene in an American cabaret where Ted had taken Kay. He was alone at the bar when the woman entered, swathed in white from turban to dancing pumps. Kay had come out of the dressing room to find Ted engaged in conversation with the newcomer.
As Kay approached the woman turned, staring coldly, and said something in a threatening voice, which Kay did not understand. Ted had passed it off by saying that Ilah was a woman he had met in dancing places here and there in the ports on the trans-Pacific route. She was a dancer of some fame.
Another indelible memory of the trip was the excellent discipline at the Trans-Pacific Airways bases on the tiny islands strung across the ocean. Kay thought the colonizers had done well.
It was all part of the scientific planning of which Ted was so proud.
Kay treasured these memories because, almost as soon as the honeymoon was over, Ted had to leave her, this time for a longer stay in the Orient. She was very lonely in the little house on the beach at Ship Harbor.

BUT Dickie was with her now, highly pleased to be at home. Dickie was going to day school, and aside from school hours, was usually with Kay. He came to adore her and, when the flying colony saw what an attractive before I had a throne, but I've stepped up higher now."

King Edward proved himself a gentleman, a friend, a knightly monarch, when he asked his good friend, Mrs. Simpson, to go along on the yachting party just as he would have done a year ago when he was the debonair, dashing Prince of Wales. ## HOPE STAR, HOPE, ARKANSAS home she was making for Ted and his adopted son, it took her to its collective heart.

As days passed Kay missed the excitement of flying. Her job on the Overland Airways had never been a grind. Each day had brought new faces and new experiences. She missed the spirit of gay camaraderie she had enjoyed. Now she was Ted Grubman's wife, and there was a certain dignity that she felt she owed to the title.
Doris had taken over Kay's post as stewardess, flying between Reno and Oakland, and there were nights when the two got together for little chats.
Alice Miller was expecting a child and Chuck, her pilot-husband, had received a raise.
"Kay, darling," Doris commented dryly, "sometimes I think girls only take these jobs as stepping-stones to marriage. But not for me! I love my job and my freedom."
Kay laughed. "And when Ted is away I'm perfectly miserable. That's life, with a vengeance."
Dickie rose up from the floor to say, "But I stay with you every night. You're not lonely with a big man like me in the house, are you?"
They both laughed, and Dickie returned to his model airplane.
"You'll step off with Ralph Bangs yet!" Kay warned.
Doris frowned. "That was a mean trick you played on me, sending Ralph over to dine with me that night at your apartment. The very next day I was walking along the beach with a parasol behind my head. I heard a whistle, and when I turned around—it was Ralph! And was his face red! He thought I was somebody else. I brought the parasol down on his head."
At this moment the telephone rang, and Kay got up to answer it.
"The next time I meet that guy I'll break his head!" Doris continued.
The voice on the phone was Ralph Bangs. "It's for you, Doris," Kay said.
Doris picked up the phone. She said, "Listen, you—But then she stopped to listen to what Ralph was saying. After a minute or so she forgot her indignation, turned to Kay and her voice was eager, even gay.
"There's a party going on over at Ralph's apartment. A whole mob from the flying colony. They want us to come over right away."
"Up?" Kay said, laughing. "I'm afraid you'll have to go alone."

Doris. I've got to help Dickie with his lessons. Arithmetic has got me down! And I'm writing a letter to Ted, to go off on the next plane to Manila."

Doris frowned, but turned back to the telephone, and listened again. Ralph had heard what Kay said.
"Monte Blaine's on the wire now," Doris added. "He thinks he can persuade you to come."
Kay came to the phone, and said indulgently, "Hello, Monte. Sorry. No can do. I'm such a dutiful wife and home-maker that I'm not any more fun. I'd put a crimp in the party. But please have a good time, and invite me some other time—when Ted's here. We'd both love to come."
Doris put on her cloak again. "Six weeks is a long time when the cat's away!" she said. "But you know your mind." She added, in a low voice, so that Dickie couldn't hear, "Sato is a competent n-u-r-s-e, if you get what I mean."
Dickie stood up, to say indignantly, "I don't need a nurse! I even fly my own plane now. Yesterday Jerry and I sneaked off behind the hangars, and he let me pilot a transport plane all by myself."
"Dickie!" Kay said. "They don't let little boys fly big planes. And Jerry was in San Francisco yesterday."

But Dickie's vivid imagination suffered not one whit. He went on glibly, "Oh, then, that was my brother who took me up and let me fly the plane. He lives way over yonder on the other side of the bay. You don't know. You haven't lived here long."
Of course Dickie didn't have a brother, but this time Kay only smiled. "Now you get right to your spelling," she said. Then she walked with Doris to the door.
When she turned to Dickie again he was looking at a map of the trans-Pacific flight. "Pal, where would Ted be tonight?" he asked.
Kay pointed at a dot on the map. "Right there. Flying through the moonlight over the ocean. I'll bet he's thinking about you."
Then she whispered to herself, "And about me."
For a second, something like fear clutched at her heart. Suppose something should happen to Ted? But she had complete confidence in him. She must never let herself think about the dangers he faced each time he went away. On the trans-Pacific flight the human element didn't fail Ted had told her so.
(To Be Continued)

Bobcats Drilled in Passes for Smackover

Hammons Planning Diversified Attack

Smackover, Having Scouted Zebra Game, Will Take to the Air

Wide-open football, featuring passes, was in the making Thursday as the Hope High School football team prepared for the invasion of the Smackover High School Buckaroos here Friday night.

In a scrimmage session Wednesday Coach Hammons stressed a passing attack with hopes of creating a more diversified offensive threat.

Hammons had Vasco Bright, ace of the Bobcat backfield, heaving passes all over the field. Bright, incidentally, is the team's best punter. His long kicks were one of the features that stood out in the Pine Bluff game last week.

Air play, both offensive and defensive, will be studied again Thursday afternoon, the coach said.

Reports from Smackover indicated that the Buckaroos were planning to use the air lanes here Friday night—so a battle in the air is in prospect when the two teams meet.

The Smackover coach, Allen Berry, scouted the Hope-Zebra game in Pine Bluff last week and saw for himself that the big Bobcat line was capable of stopping one of the best running attacks in Arkansas high school football.

After practice was concluded Wednesday Coach Hammons said that he was pleased with the showing of his men. The offensive is clicking and the line is charging with greater speed than any time this year, said Hammons.

Carpenters Wednesday completed work on one section of temporary bleachers on the east side of the field. The other section is expected to be completed Thursday night. Both sections will seat approximately 500 persons.

Some modern cameras are built to take 500 pictures a second, whereas the old-time camera required so much time to take one picture that a subject had to sit motionless, with his head held in a clamp.

Hubbell Is 'Death' to A. L.'s Batters

In 28 Innings the Americans Have Failed to Earn Single Run

First in a series of four daily stories about the World Series out-look.

By GEORGE TUCKER
NEW YORK (AP)—It develops now that the conquering Yankees are taking an inordinate interest in Carl Hubbell, whose long left arm has slowly but inexorably pitched the Giants to the brink of the World Series.

Baseball experts say their interest in him amounts to a fetish; that he is all they talk about. They scan the sports pages for any mention of his name. From Gehrig on down to the bat boy they want to know what he eats for breakfast—and what he tosses to right-handed batters!

Well, if you place any faith in past performances, Hubbell—for the Yankees—is going to be a most annoying fellow. For, in 28 innings of World Series and inter-league all-star competition, the American leaguers have yet to score their first earned run against him.

Takes Two Series Games
It was in the 1933 all-star game in Chicago that the screw-ball from Meeker, Okla., gave his American league adversaries their first glimpse of the old whifferee. In two innings on the mound he fanned one and allowed one hit.

Two months later, after the Giants won the pennant he began the World Series by striking out the first three Senators to face him. In all Hubbell whiffed 10 batters, and yielded only five hits, all singles. The Giants won that one, 4 to 2, both Washington tallies being unearned.

Three days later, in the fourth game of the series (played in Washington with the livelier and to him unfamiliar A.L. ball) Hubbell went 11 innings to win by 2 to 1. Washington's only score in this game also was unearned. King Carl struck out five and allowed eight hits.

Whiffs Six in Two Innings
Almost everyone remembers what Hub did in the all-star game in 1934. He helped himself to everlasting fame by striking out six in the first two innings—five consecutively, including such celebrated swimmers as Ruth, Gehrig, Fox, Simmons and Cronin. At this point Bill Dickey of the Yanks broke the spell with a single to right, but Hub came right back and struck out Gomez. In three innings that day he struck out six, allowed two hits, and no runs.

Hubbell wasn't available for the 1935 all-star classic (the day previously he pitched a 5-hit shutout against Brooklyn), but he was on the firing line at the all-star game in Boston this year. Following Dizzy Dean to the mound, Hubbell took up where he left off in '34, and went three innings without even being threatened. He struck out a pair and allowed two hits, both singles.

That's Hubbell's record in 28 innings

Miniature Grid Game Played by 6

5 Arkansas High Schools Using 6 Instead of 11 Men This Year

By DON WHITEHEAD
Associated Press Writer
MARION, Ark.—(AP)—Miniature grid... table tennis... and now miniature football.

Through necessity, five small Arkansas schools will present football this season played by 6-men teams on under-sized gridirons.

It's an innovation the coaches believe will click with the fans.

Students and townspeople wanted football, but the combined grade and high schools had an average attendance each of only about 200 students. Squads reporting for practice in previous years numbered between 12 and 20. Reserves were few.

Under such conditions, it was highly problematical from one week-end to the next whether there would be a team on the field at all.

So the football coaches at Crawfordville, Marion, Earl, Tyrone and Le-panto got together and evolved a scheme to play the game with only six men on a side—three in the line and three in the backfield.

"It was the only way we could have football at all," says L. H. Polk, Marion, coach. "I have only 14 men out for the team, and it would be impossible to put an 11-man team on the field throughout the entire season."

This idea gives us a chance to teach the boys the fundamentals of football and at the same time have a wide open, fast game that should give the spectators plenty of action and thrills.

The fields will be 80x40 yards instead of the regulation 100x53 yards. The scoring system will be the same, but a team will be required to make 15 yards in four tries for a first down instead of 10 yards as in regulation football. Backfield men on offense and defense must be three yards behind the line of scrimmage before the ball is snapped.

"We may have to change the rules slightly, after we have played several games," Polk explains. "It is more or less an experiment, but I believe it's here to stay."

Polk, after several days of drilling his small squad, is still puzzled over building a defense.

"It will be an open game," he points out, "and there will be less of the type of body blocking seen in the regular games. That will eliminate the danger of injuries almost entirely, with no piling upon line plays."

"It's hard to stop the offense with only three men in the line. There'll be plenty of touchdowns."

Electric fans increase room temperature instead of lowering it. Bodily temperature being higher than that of the air, relief is felt when a breeze strikes the body and carries away heat from it.

Hubbell Gets His 16th Win in Row

Giants' Pitcher Has Won 26 This Season, Against 6 Defeats

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(AP)—The New York Giants' pitching master, Carl Hubbell, completed the best record in the major leagues in two years Wednesday by achieving his 16th straight win, a 5-to-4 decision over the Phillies.

Hubbell's victory streak was the first 16-game run in the big time since Schoolboy Rowe pitched the Tigers into the American League pennant in 1934. It was Hubbell's 26th win of the season against six defeats.

He was master of the Phils through seven innings, but in the eighth and ninth got into enough trouble to put his streak on the fire until Travis Jackson threw out Jose Gomez for the final out.

The Phils scored three runs in the eighth, Dolph Camilli hit a homer in the ninth, and the Phils had a man on base with only one out in the final frame, to give Hubbell the most trouble since his streak began in mid-July. But the Giants had staked him to a five-run lead through the first seven innings.

Dick Bartell's double and Jim Ripple's single brought in one run in the first; Mel Ott's triple and Ripple's base hit added another in the third; Travis Jackson's two batters, Joe Moore's single and Ripple's long fly produced two more in the fourth, belting Pete Sivess, the Phils' starting pitcher out of the game. The last run came in the seventh off Orville Jorgens. Gus Mancuso doubling and Burgess Whitehead singled him home.

Washington U. and California Strong

Stanford Practically Stripped This Season by Loss of Lettermen

By RUSS NEWLAND
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Along the far western front football's drums roll out the word of a campaign opening which finds old favorites in new roles and a definite shift to the wide open championship scrambles of other years.

For the last three years it has been Stanford against the field. Things are different now. The team which represented the west in three successive Rose Bowl games lost nine of its eleven regulars.

The 1936 gridiron skirmishes open with Stanford in the position of dark horse. Its titular qualifications will be tested by several stiff battles. Second-string players of last season must prove their ability as front-rankers. However, a few returning men of experience and a number of sparkling prospects indicate the team of Coach Tiny Thornhill will not be of the weaker sort.

The University of Washington, with veterans, and the University of California, with sufficient material to man two better-than-average clubs, are early favorites.

Northern enthusiasts believe Jimmy Phelan's Washington squad will breeze through Pacific coast conference opposition for an undisputed title.

Washington Has Veterans
Eight of Washington's starting regulars are men of three years' experience, counting freshman service. The Huskies face the toughest opening assignment of any team on the coast—against a University of Minnesota eleven rated by some as on a par with last year's undefeated squad. The game will be played in Seattle, September 26, and if Washington clears this hurdle, the Huskies will become odds-on favorites to whip eight west coast conference rivals through the balance of the schedule.

While Washington and California have found the most pre-season backing, shrewd observers have established Bill Spaulding's University of California as Los Angeles Bruins as a definite threat in any league.

Along with California and Stanford, Spaulding's 1935 crew finished in a tie for the conference championship. If anything, this year's U.C.L.A. aggregation should be stronger than that of last season. There are seasoned performers for practically every spot. The loss of Chuck Cheshire, brilliant halfback, is expected to be balanced by the return of the coach's son, young Bill Spaulding, in addition to the development of a couple of other yard-gaining worthies.

University of Southern California, once kingdom of western football and just emerging from a period of depression, also will not be regarded lightly this season.

He'll Soon Know
Headman Howard Jones of the Trojans should find out early a few facts about his team. U.S.C. opens September 26 against a strong conference rival, Oregon State college. Lon Stinson of O.S.C. says the outlook is the best since he coached the 1933 "iron man" eleven which held U.S.C. to a scoreless tie without a substitution.

In the University of Oregon camp there is a noticeable improvement in backfield power.

Coach Orin Hollingsberry of Washington State college is none too optimistic—because of a lack of reserves. His plant will fall on deaf ears because it has been heard from the same source before, but the Cougar squad regularly has been formidable on the field.

Under the new schedule arrangement neither Idaho nor Montana will be important factors in the Pacific coast conference race this season. Both will play only four conference contests, including one between themselves. The other eight conference members will play a round robin schedule to determine the championship.

against American league slugging—24 strikeouts, 19 hits, and no earned runs.

Maybe it's time the Yankees took an interest in him.

Why Pave Streets with Concrete?

Flower petals are coated with tiny globules of natural oils, differing in composition in each flower, and these give off the fragrant scent.

Electric fans increase room temperature instead of lowering it. Bodily temperature being higher than that of the air, relief is felt when a breeze strikes the body and carries away heat from it.

WHY PAVE STREETS WITH CONCRETE?

here's why —

- 1 Every street demands a gritty, non-skid surface for the protection of motorists and pedestrians.
- 2 At night you need a pavement with high visibility.
- 3 Safety also calls for a pavement that is free from chuck holes, ruts and bumps... and stays that way with minimum maintenance.
- 4 You want a pavement that drains quickly... that is easily cleaned and stays clean... no depressions to catch dirt.
- 5 You want a pavement that makes the whole neighborhood look modern, prosperous, attractive.

Concrete... and only concrete... completely meets all of these specifications.

Mt. Pleasant

The Mt. Pleasant Home Demonstration club met on Sept. 8 with Mrs. D. O. Porterfield. Our county home demonstrator was with us and so was Mrs. Henton our extension service worker. The regular September program was carried out with excellent talks made by both Mrs. Henton and Miss Bullington on home-making, school lunches and garden planting. Refreshments were served by the hostess and an old fashioned spelling match that every club member took part in ended the program for the day. All reported a very helpful afternoon.

Shower Springs

The Shower Springs Home Demonstration club met Thursday September 17 in the home of Mrs. Lula Laster. The meeting was opened by singing "Take the Name of Jesus With You." A portion of Proverbs 22 was read by LaVeta England after which Mrs. Velma Collier led in prayer. The roll call was answered by each member present telling of an incident happened to her when she was in school. A round table discussion was held on "What is Education?" and "Is Education Worth While?" Plans were made for achievement day to be held in Hope, October 17. Miss Bullington gave out some bulletins on school lunches and then gave an interesting discussion on them. Unless there is a change in date there will be no cards sent to remind the members of the meeting. The next meeting will be with Mrs. H. C. Collier October 15.

Germany to Regain Her Lost Colonies

This Is Goal of Nazis' Next Four-Year International Plan

By Associated Press
"World Enemy No. 1—Bolshevism!" Thus Germany paraphrases a G-man term on placards plastering Nuremberg on the occasion of the annual Nazi convention.
Nuremberg tramped 50,000 disciplined youths and 750,000 other visitors and Nazis. Against the background of their "hells" and stiff-armed salutes, Adolf Hitler entered the city. Brown-shirted and stern-faced, he asserted:
"In the past year I restored full sovereignty to the nation." (In that period he had remilitarized the Rhineland and increased Germany's armed forces, both in violation of the Versailles treaty.)
Then before a clamorous convention Hitler disclosed plans for the next four years. A proclamation read for the throat-troubled chancellor by a Bavarian Nazi leader outlined a program aimed at making Germany economically independent.

"Our colonial demands are part and parcel of this program," it said. "We must build up our raw material forces. Germany is compelled to obtain raw materials by the sale of industrial goods abroad. It is regrettable the world does not understand this." Europe, long expecting that the restoration of Germany's war-lost colonies would be next on Hitler's program, wondered just how the demand would be pressed.

Russia Is Ready
Bristling at reports of the "world enemy" posters, Russia's general staff drilled near Minsk, midway between Moscow and Berlin. There the staff and the Red army worked out problems of defending White Russia, buffer state on Russia's western border.
Proudly watching his well-drilled mechanized units, Marshal Klement E. Voroshiloff snapped:
"The fascist enemy is preparing to attack us from the outside. Let them prepare. We were ready long ago to meet them."

On the other side of Germany, France met Germany's army increase, announced August 24, by deciding to buy $210,000,000 worth of tanks, guns and other instruments of war. The 40 million French will not try to match soldier-for-soldier with the 60 million Germans.
Portugal's Spot
Spain's war has put next-door neighbor Portugal on a hot spot.

Quickly-smothered flames were seen this week.
In Portugal's harbor of Lisbon, at the mouth of the Tagus river, which flows from Spain, the crews of the destroyer Dao and the sloop Alfonso de Albuquerque planned mutiny.
Four cadets leaped overboard, however, and spread the alarm. Forts opened fire, disabling both ships as they tried to flee the harbor. The vessels were towed to a beach and the mutineers thrown in chains.
With Lisbon under "a state of precaution," the Portuguese dictator, President Carmona, directed his agents to find out if the mutiny had any link with Spanish politics.

France Divided
The French word for "no" was Socialist Premier Leon Blum's reply this week to demands for intervention on behalf of Spain's loyalists.
He said the French communists who cried "arms and airplanes for Spain," lacked proof that Italy and Germany were aiding the rebels. Strikes in France lent pressure to the communist demands and insiders said Blum might call a special session of parliament to force a showdown.

'Hot' Arms
When the roll was called in London at a conference to insure isolation of the Spanish war, Portugal wasn't there. Worried diplomats of France, England, Germany and other nations did the best they could, but Portugal lies next to Spain and any program to prevent smuggling of arms to belligerents would need Portugal's assent.

In America, Secretary of State Hull called on "the thinking people of each land" to "combat warlike tendencies" lest civilization be destroyed.

3 Great Dictators Live Very Plainly

Mussolini, Hitler and Stalin Are Models of Personal Self-Denial

By The Associated Press
Benito Mussolini exercises not so much to develop energy as to burn it up.
Italy's sun-bronzed dictator, probably the world's most athletic ruler, thrives on physical exertion—fast, violent and dangerous. It's an escape valve for him.

Likes to Swim
His intense athletic activity is in marked contrast to the more cloistered, sedentary habits of Adolf Hitler of Germany and Joseph Stalin of Russia, who, like himself, control large nations virtually single-handed.

Whenever he is in Rome, Mussolini starts his day with a vigorous horse-back ride. In the summer, when heat-laden winds stifle the energies of his countrymen, he substitutes a swim and a run on the beach, and often works under the sun on his Mediterranean estate until noon.

He delights in skiing, motorcycling, speedboating, flying and motoring—all at breakneck speed. Milder sports hold little attraction for him; he never has taken up tennis or golf.

Lends Plain Life
His morning canter is his only set health rule. He abstains, however, from strong drinks, eats plenty of simple foods, drinks a little wine, and goes to bed early.

As a young man, he gained a reputation for being able to work long hours on little, irregular sleep. Now, a grandfather, he relaxes more regularly, but his capacity for work seems undiminished.

Hitler a Vegetarian
The 46-year-old Hitler never varies his simple, self-denying rules of living: a strict vegetarian diet, short but deep sleep, and long walks.

Alcohol and tobacco are taboo. In his earlier years he sipped an occasional stein of Bavarian beer, but discovering that his mind was clearer without alcohol, he became a teetotaler.

He never eats meat. His breakfast consists of a glass of milk and several slices of coarse, peasant bread. Green and fresh vegetables are plentiful in other meals.

Blazing Trail for Mail Route Over Treacherous Atlantic

After speeding through fog and heavy rain, and against strong headwinds most of the way, the Dornier flying boat, Zephyr, is shown above as it taxied to its dock at Port Washington, N. Y., at the end of a 2390-mile non-stop flight from the Azores in 22 hours, seven minutes. The Diesel-powered ship averaged slightly more than 100 miles per hour in blazing a new airmail route over the North Atlantic.

With the fuel load it carried, the Zephyr could not take off from the water, so it was catapulted at terrific speed from the deck of the German steamship Schwabenland, after the method shown in this photo. Gigantic compressed air cylinders shot the plane into the air while its rotors were at their maximum. Simultaneously the catapult base ship steamed ahead at full speed. Catapult launching from base ships is a permanent feature of the airmail project.

dulgence is desert. He likes the pastries and puddings (mehlspeisen) for which his native region is famous.
Long hikes in mountainous regions are Hitler's only vigorous exercise and his only way of keeping fit.

As his attendance at the recent Olympic games illustrated, he is keenly interested in athletics. He frequently attends boxing bouts, ice hockey games, figure skating exhibitions and auto races.

He admires the sea and relishes trips on naval vessels, but he evokes no interest in aquatic sports.

Both Enjoy Music
For mental relaxation both Mussolini and Hitler enjoy music. Il Duce not infrequently plays the violin in the seclusion of his family.

Hitler likes the opera. Some of his most stirring speeches, it is said, have been written on his return from the opera, deeply moved by Richard Wagner's music.

Both enjoy movies. Greta Garbo is one of Hitler's favorite actresses. Mussolini, as a fan for American films, is virtually Italy's movie censor. He sees the pictures privately long before they reach the theaters, and if he disapproves, they do not appear.

Like the Italian and German dictators, Joseph Stalin is known as one of the hardest workers in his country.

Sometimes he uses three shifts of secretaries during an 18-hour day.
He has spurned frequent advice to take periodic rests. As far as the public is aware, driving his own automobile is his only outdoor diversion. He likes to exchange seats with his chauffeur for spins over the countryside near Moscow.

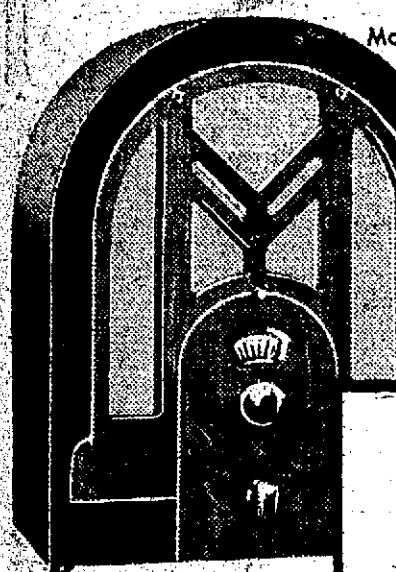

Before the revolution, Stalin was an excellent horseman and enjoyed playing polo abroad. His attitude toward the game, however, has changed. Now he calls it a "primitive" sport.

In chess, as in politics, Stalin is described as an excellent strategist. He likes to play with the black figures, giving his opponent the white.

Friends say his game is vigorous in the offensive, but that he never hesitates to retreat when the situation demands.

Shows How He Shot Self—and It Happens Again

PORT ARTHUR, Texas.—(AP)—Tony Landry, 16, guitar player with a tent show, accidentally shot himself in the hand two years ago.

"Here's the way it happened," said Tony recently, picking up a revolver used as stage property. There was a loud report.

The wadding from the blank shell injured the hand which had been shot previously and physicians said he probably would never be able to play a guitar again.
